A Letter from Rev. Edie

Rev. Edie Lenz
Pastor

In the middle of July, NASA revealed to the world the first glimpses of space being taken by the James Webb Space Telescope. Perhaps you paused to stare in wonder at the images, perhaps you missed them being revealed. If you have not yet taken the time to peek deeply into space, don't worry, we are going to be spending some time in September marveling at the world in which we live, the vastness of the universe, the connections between faith and science, and our place in the cosmos. What can we learn about our world and ourselves? What can we learn about God?

In recent generations there has been an assumed animosity between religion and science, that one cancelled or disproved the other. There have been in some areas of the globe a demand that if you are to believe in God, you must deny, ignore, or avoid conversation about scientific discovery, the exploration of the universe, and evolution, specifically. But it was not always the case. The earliest scientists we think of as upending our religious understanding of the world were themselves deeply religious people.

Copernicus, who upended the teachings of the church, claiming that we orbit the sun rather than the sun orbiting the earth, was a deeply faithful teacher of the church who sought to understand the mysteries of God by studying mathematics and astronomy.

Galileo, who has been referred to as the father of modern science, spent much of his later life under house arrest having been convicted of heresy, was also a deeply religious and faithful man whose explorations and experiments were, he believed, furthering human understanding of God's world.

Charles Darwin, now held up as one who has done the most to divorce science and religion, was actually a deeply devout Christian. Darwin saw his work, the understanding of the origin of species, as a search for "centers of creation." He wrote of the divergence of species and our ability to evolve and adapt as evidence of a divine hand being involved in the world. He was deeply troubled by the problem of evil which caused him to question much of the faith that originally inspired his work.

Throughout much of Christian history, it was the most religious who sought to relieve human suffering by understanding the world. It was monks and nuns who produced new discoveries about the world, medicine, and science. Science and religion were not opposites, but one and the same; to understand the world was to better understand the nature of God.

I encountered perceived animosity between religion and science as I sat in the NICU when Caleb was first born. As I held my tiny baby, I struck up a conversation with one of his nurses who asked,

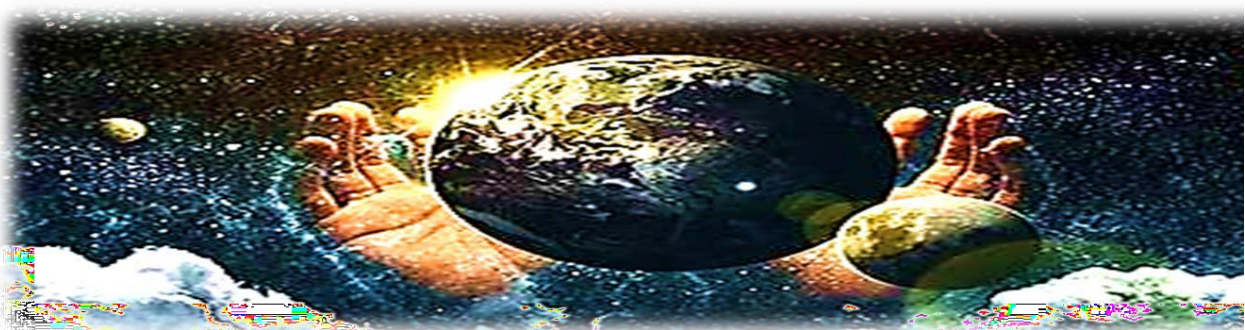

“What do you and your husband do for a living?” When I explained I was a pastor and Brian was a chemist, she looked startled and asked, “How does that work?” Looking down at Caleb – attached to wires, cords and machines I said, “Like this.”

I know that it is the hard work of science that has given us the ability to care for preemies, but who gave those doctors and nurses the passion to explore and learn? Who gave them wisdom? Caleb was cared for by wise and trusted medical professionals, while also being surrounded by the community of God praying for him. It is not an either-or proposition, but rather it is a both-and reality.

As people of faith, how do we begin to reclaim and recover a sense of wonder about God’s creation as well as a reverence for the work of God in the world? How can we learn from all that science has to teach us AND reflect back the nuance of a faithful God who is still active in the world? How do we understand the wideness of creation and our unique and precious place in it as God’s people? This is a mystery we will be exploring in the month of September.

Grace and peace in Christ,
Rev. Edie

Worship Readings, Sermons & Reflections

As you reflect on our readings this month,
I invite you to spend some time wondering . . .

What is God asking of you? What does it mean for you to take up a cross and follow?

Reflect on the vastness of creation – your particular place in the world or the universe. God numbers the stars of the sky and the hairs on your head. Sit with this a while.

What do you understand to be our role in creation?

What are you doing to be a good steward of the gifts God has given you? How might you increase your faithfulness?

The following are readings and sermons that Rev. Edie will focus on during Sunday worship. If you don't have Internet access, you may read and reflect on these Scripture passages in your bible.

You can participate in virtual Sunday worship livestreamed on Facebook at 10:00 a.m. Sunday mornings or recorded and posted on our website at www.hickoryhillspres.org by noon on Sunday.

David, king of Judah and Israel, is one of the most significant people in the entire Bible. His reign shaped the entire nation of Israel, and Jesus himself is known as the 'Son of David.' His story occupies the majority of the books of 1 and 2 Samuel in the Old Testament.

Please join us at bible study as we explore the remarkable life of David.

Who Was St. Cecilia?

Although Christianity has a rich history of saints, one that has always interested me is Cecilia, virgin and martyr, and who became “patroness of church music.”

There is some history that indicates she came from a Christian family. Her father was a wealthy Roman senator and Cecilia ministered to the blind, and the Latin origin of her name—Caecitas—means “blindness,” although she wasn’t blind.

Cecilia’s connection to music didn’t happen until the Middle Ages when various artists began painting her likeness with musical instruments. By 1570, the first St. Cecilia festival took place in Normandy (sort of a “Renaissance Fair”).

After that date, musical festivals were held all over Europe, particularly in England. In the United States, the first St. Cecilia Society was founded in 1795, and spread across the states thereafter. These were private musical societies that raised money for the musical arts and held concerts and balls, including the chamber concerts, orchestral works, and vocal music.

Some are still in existence today.

CELEBRATING GERT!

On Sunday, August 7, 2022, HHPC friends celebrated Gertrude (Gert) Vickers, a long-time HHPC member, on her 99th birthday. Memories were shared, hugs were given and a beautiful and delicious cake in her honor was enjoyed by all.

We wish Gert much happiness and joy in the years ahead and thank God for the blessing of her friendship.

Our birthday girl Gert Vickers with a lovely smile and a delicious birthday cake from her friends.

REV SUMMER WORSHIP: A LABYRINTH WALK

On Sunday, July 31, REV worship was celebrated in a unique and reflective way. REV participants walked through a beautiful labyrinth located on the grounds of the Center in Palos Heights.

The labyrinth with its circular paths represents a journey or path to our own center and back again out into the world.

Labyrinths have long been used as meditation and prayer tools.

FAITHWALKING PROGRAM RESUMES IN SEPTEMBER

Our Faithwalking participants have come back refreshed from summer break to continue their spiritual formation process of following the way of Jesus, experiencing ongoing transformation, and developing effective practices for mission.

Rev. Edie has led these groups in spiritual format since 2020. Anyone interested in more information about Faithwalking is asked to contact Rev. Edie.

Please keep our Faithwalkers in your prayers.

Falling Leaves Meditation

Here's a meditation exercise that can be a powerful tool for sharpening your intentions and life goals during Autumn.

Materials needed: Printed copy of the tree (at right), pen or pencil

1. Place the image of the tree in your lap or on a table in front of you where you can see it.
2. Sit still and upright, relaxed and alert.
3. Focus on your breathing. With each exhale let your body relax more deeply.
4. When you are ready, take a look at the tree. Focus your attention on the TRUNK of the tree. This represents a GOAL you'd like to accomplish in this season of your life. When a goal comes to mind, write it next to the tree trunk. Don't force a goal to materialize. Spend some time in silence listening to your heart and spirit until it emerges with absolute clarity.
5. When you have a goal in mind, turn your attention to the LEAVES on the tree. Think about the THINGS YOU NEED TO LET GO OF in order to make room in your life for this goal to be accomplished. This is a time to think about the things that may no longer serve a useful purpose in your life. When these things come to mind, write them next to the leaves on the tree. If you have trouble letting go of things, remember that they will become the fertilizer that provides nourishment for the tree. (Some people might find it helpful to close their eyes during this part of the meditation.)
6. Finally, turn your attention to the ROOTS of the tree. Think about the PEOPLE AND RESOURCES you will need to bring into your life in order to accomplish your goal. What kinds of things will feed and nourish your goal as well as yourself? When these things come to mind, write them next to the roots of the tree. (Some people might again find it helpful to close their eyes during this part of the meditation.)
7. As a last step, close your eyes and take the image of this tree into your mind's eye. Sit with it for a while and see if any additional insights arise. If they do, write them down on the page after you open your eyes. Keep this image with you and refer to it on a daily basis until you achieve your goal. Continue to write insights on the leaves and roots as they come to you.

Fall Colors and Associated Emotions

Fall provides a time for warm, rich colors to be clearly seen in full display as the leaves begin to change. From cinnamon red to chocolatey brown, the following are the autumn hues and what emotions they may provoke.

Red is an emotionally intense color. It evokes feelings of passion and desire and stimulates people to make quick decisions.

Reddish-brown is the shade most often associated with the fall season.

Orange is a bright and warm color and represents positive emotions, such as joy and happiness, as it combines the stimulation of red and the cheerfulness of yellow.

A dark, rich shade of Orange is considered the color of fall and harvest (which we can probably thank pumpkins for).

Yellow is most often associated with happiness. The color of the sun is used to evoke pleasant, cheerful and optimistic feelings.

Brown is a natural, bring-you-down-to-earth kind of color. It's also one that gives people a strong sense of comfort and calmness. In color psychology, brown is known as an honest, sincere and healthy color.

What are your favorite colors of Autumn?
